'Gentle giant' killed by IED in Afghanistan

DEATH A "Gentle giant" who fought hardship on the battlefield without a word of complaint was killed yesterday by an improvised explosive device, the fourth member of the Canadian military to die in Afghanistan this month.

Trooper Larry Rudd, 26, died at 12:30 p.m. local time after an IED detonated near the Panjwaii district village of Salavat while he was on a combat resupply patrol.

"Trooper Rudd will be remembered by the soldiers that served alongside him as a professional soldier who never complained regardless of the hardship that he and his crew endured," said Col. Simon Hetherington, deputy commander of Task Force Kandahar at a press conference.

Police recover body of 26-year-old swimmer off Petrie Island

Ottawa police recovered the body of a man who went missing while swimming at Petrie Island yesterday.

The Ottawa police dive team recovered the body at the city beach at around 4:45 p.m. — more than four hours after four people saw the man dive underwater for the last time.

The 26-year-old man was swimming alone off the east side of the beach when "two adults and two children saw him dive under the water and disappear, with no signs of him coming up," said Bruce Raymond, acting district chief with the Ottawa fire department.

"There was no sign of struggle. He simply disappeared into the water."

The witnesses called the incident in at 12:06 p.m., said Raymond.

On the hot holiday yesterday, stunned onlookers watched as water rescue crews used boats and formed lines to conduct systematic searches in the water.

Orleans resident Martine Jolicoeur said she "saw a woman running across the beach, crying on her cellphone."

"I was sitting here with my girlfriend and I heard sirens ... and saw them all coming in," said Cumberland resident Nick Charette.

Police later moved everyone off the east beach for the recovery.

Raymond said residents are warned to stay out of the water until lifeguards begin working next month.

"I think the key is that there's no supervision," said Raymond. "It's a very dangerous section of the beach. It was a former quarry, so there's a lot of very deep pockets. It was also used as a mooring for boats for many years so there could be obstacles such as anchors and ropes and chains, so it's a very dangerous part of the beach to be entering."

Police have not released the name of the victim, though they said he has family in the west end of Ottawa.

Traffic switch in ByWard Market earns rave reviews

PLANNING It's been just less than a month since traffic was redirected in the ByWard Market as part of a trial run for a proposed pedestrian zone at York and William, but some residents and merchants say they're already seeing improvements.

Greg Brayford of Doozy Candle said gridlock has eased since cars have been prevented from turning onto William from York. "I think the City of Ottawa got this one right for once by blocking the cars from turning," he said.

Market resident Chris Tudin said he's looking forward to the pedestrian zone. "I walk every day in this area and adding more pedestrian areas to this great market is a good thing. There's too many cars going by, sometimes it's dangerous and sometimes it's OK," he said. "That proposal looks great."

Patrick Quealey, chair of the city's environmental advisory committee, said that although there have been a few problems for delivery trucks in the area, he's been hearing mostly positive reviews since the traffic was redirected.

"Nearly everyone I've talked to likes the idea and can't wait for the final construction to begin," he said.

35,000 check out museum's new look

Despite lineups, patrons give glowing thumbs-up to renovations, exhibits

TRACEY TONG
tracey.tong@metronews.ca

Two days after the grand reopening of the Canadian Museum of Nature, thousands of people lined up under the hot sun yesterday for their turn to check out the hype.

And they weren't disappointed.

City resident Derek Spencer, his wife and their three children used to visit the museum every six weeks before it closed for renovations.

The verdict?

"It's great," Spencer said of the museum yesterday. "It's incredible. They've done a lot of good changes. It's nice, bright and airy and there's lots to see. It's nice that they've opened it all up with the stairway now."

For his son, Corbin, 3, the best part was "the tail" on the museum's blue whale in the new water gallery.

"It's just a beautiful atmosphere," said first-time visitor Darcy Fridgen of Arnprior.

With more than 35,000 people attending the opening over the weekend, the reopening has been "even better" than what president and CEO of the Canadian Museum of Nature Joanne DiCosimo had envisioned during the past six years of renovations.

TRACEY TONG/METRO OTTAWA

John Moore, executive director of bullion and refinery services at the Royal Canadian Mint, right, presents a collectors' coin to Canadian Museum of Nature president and CEO Joanne DiCosimo yesterday in honour of the museum's centenary and reopening.

"I imagined it would be fabulous, but it's been that and more," she said yesterday.

"It's been absolutely wonderful, after a six-year renovation project, to be able to open the doors and watch people's faces as they enter, and then to see them enjoy the exhibits.

"I've heard them say so many times that they want to come back when it isn't as crowded."

Longtime museum patrons will notice the amenities are much improved, said Liz McCrea, director of communications for the museum.

Although there were lineups all weekend, "people were very patient," said Marie Lasnier, director of community services at the museum. "As soon as they exited, they said it was worth it."

Ross Creighton clips a Hampshire sheep at the Sheep Shearing Festival at the Canadian Museum of Agriculture yesterday.

Sheep, dogs, kids mix it up at festival

AGRICULTURE The loud bleating of sheep and lambs led Ottawa families to the Canadian Museum of Agriculture yesterday for the final day of this year's Sheep Shearing Festival.

Ross Creighton, one of only a few professional sheep shearers in eastern Ontario, demonstrated his technique, honed over 32 years, to an audience of museum visitors. In a little under 10 minutes, he'd clipped the hooves of a Hampshire ewe and, with electric clippers, shorn it of about six pounds of wool.

Visitors were also invited to try their hand at knitting, wool carding and wool dying.

"The general point is just to teach Canadians where their food and fibre come from, so in this instance — where wool comes from — and also maybe to educate them about meat production," said Anne Lemieux-Mitchell, a farm guide with the museum.

Lemieux-Mitchell said the festival is especially aimed at kids. "You can never go wrong with kids and animals," she said.

Sheep weren't the only stars of the festival programming. Border collies and other working dogs also showed their skills in sheep-herding demonstrations and on an agility training obstacle course.

Ottawa marks $95.7M for air cargo security

As part of its ongoing pledge to shore up aviation security in the face of terrorist threats, the federal government announced yesterday that it will spend $95.7 million over five years to bolster air cargo security at Canadian airports.

Defence Minister Peter MacKay was one of six cabinet ministers who made similar announcements across the country.

Speaking at an Air Canada cargo facility at Halifax Stanfield International Airport, MacKay said it is vital that Canada move to protect a growing industry that is already a major component of the country's trade.

"As a major trading nation ... Canada depends on a secure, timely and efficient movement of goods by air," said MacKay. "Our most recent figures show that the value of Canada's air cargo shipments both domestic and international to be in excess of $96.5 billion annually."

ANDREW VAUGHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defence Minister Peter MacKay, standing in front of a pallet of lobsters, announces a plan yesterday at an Air Canada cargo facility in Halifax to spend $95.7 million over five years to bolster air cargo security at Canadian airports.

He said the Halifax airport alone moved 20,890 tonnes of commodities in 2008.

Although MacKay released no specific details on such things as additional jobs or new types of technologies to be purchased, he said the program would eventually incorporate all the tools available to ensure increased security.

"In essence it's more eyes on, more hands on when it comes to the handling of cargo prior to it going on a plane and also capitalizing on new technologies and, in fact, some old technologies," he said. "The use of dogs, for example, will also factor into the future."

Feds mull nixing tax breaks for oil sector

G20 Canada is contemplating taking the lead on a key G20 pledge by announcing the elimination of some tax breaks for the oil and gas sector prior to the June summit in Toronto, The Canadian Press has learned.

G20 leaders agreed last September in Pittsburgh they would reduce distorting fossil fuel subsidies over the medium term and pledged to present concrete national plans in Toronto.

But sources say Ottawa wants to get ahead of the pack. They say senior officials are studying a proposal that would see Ottawa announce plans to reduce tax support for the oil and gas sector prior to the summit.

At stake is hundreds of millions of dollars in foregone tax revenue every year, sources say.

"This is unilaterally in our interest to do this, so let's just do it," said one insider.

In the meantime, negotiators have agreed how best to define what a constitutes a fossil fuel subsidy.

While some G20 countries have argued that only consumption subsidies be targeted, others insisted, successfully, that production subsidies also be included.

Preferences

- By getting rid of tax incentives, the federal Tories would be backing up their own preference for tax neutrality in business, the argument goes. The move would also help demonstrate that Canada is serious about living up to its international commitments — a major theme for Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Move aims to hush politicos

COMMITTEES Another confrontation is brewing between the Harper government and opposition parties, with the Conservatives banning political staffers from appearing before parliamentary committees.

The Conservatives are expected to unveil a new policy on the issue today, when Parliament returns from a one-week break, said a spokesman for the prime minister.

"Ministers are the ones who are accountable for the policies, the operation and the decisions made by their staffers," Stephen Harper's director of communications, Dimitri Soudas, told CTV's Question Period. "We're not in the United States here where the American Congress calls people, grills them and does whatever they want," he said.

NATO orders down blog post after injury report

MILITARY NATO officials ordered a British military blog entry pulled down yesterday after it reported that Canadians and Americans were among more than a dozen coalition troops wounded in a Taliban rocket attack at Kandahar Airfield.

The Helmand Blog, run by several branches of the U.K. military both in England and Afghanistan, said insurgents attacked the base from two locations Saturday night, injuring 13 people from American and Canadian military contingents.

The blog quoted Senior Aircraftsman Eric Telford, 24, from 2nd Squadron of the Royal Air Force, as saying he rushed to the site of the attack and applied a tourniquet to a wounded female Canadian soldier.

Hours later, the entry was yanked after the International Security Assistance Force said it was posted without approval and contained some incorrect information.

"The information concerning wounded — numbers and nationalities — was inaccurate," ISAF spokesman Capt. Scott Costen said in an email. "It was also released contrary to ISAF policy."

Costen declined to provide the correct information. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Iconic photograph showed tragic impact of tainted tap water

THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE PHOTOS

Five-year-old girl Tamara Smith lies with her teddy bear as she is taken to an evacuation helicopter at the South Grey Bruce Health Centre in Walkerton, Ont., on May 25, 2000. Inset, a healthy Tamara Smith, 15, is seen in Walkerton, Ont., this month.

Perhaps more than any other image, the newspaper picture of a little girl on a stretcher next to a wide-eyed teddy bear jolted the outside world to the magnitude of the unfolding tragedy that was Walkerton 10 years ago.

Her small pale face shows distress and fear as she is carried to an air ambulance for a flight to hospital and into the unknown.

"I was really sick, not feeling good — and scared," says Tamara Smith, the five-year-old girl on the stretcher.

"I didn't know what was going on."

Today, Tamara is healthy 15-year-old. Her two-week hospital stay is a slowly fading memory, much like the clipping of that iconic photograph her dad, Brad Smith, still carries in his wallet. But she cannot forget.

"I talk about it with my friends sometimes. I talk about it with my mom and dad a lot."

Tamara was one of 2,500 people sickened by tainted tap water in the midwestern Ontario town of 5,000 over the May long weekend exactly a decade ago. Seven people died, the result of E. coli poisoning from cow manure washed by torrential rains into a vulnerable town well.

A judicial inquiry would pin the tragedy on the brothers who ran the town's water system; sloppy practices and oversight by the Ministry of the Environment; and budget cuts by the Conservative government of then premier Mike Harris.

Former utilities manager Stan Koebel, now 57, was given a one-year sentence after he and younger brother Frank pleaded guilty to common nuisance. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Explosives at site of future B.C. park?

The southern British Columbia community of Vernon is hoping to turn land that the Department of National Defence has used for military training into a nature park.

There's just one problem — the DND says the 56-hectare plot might still be littered with explosives similar to those that have cost eight area residents their lives since the Second World War.

Roses Pond, which is now home to several different types of wildlife and sits in an area just outside Vernon referred to locally as the Commonage, was first used by the military in 1942.

Until the war came to an end, Canadian soldiers conducted training exercises inside the Commonage that involved anything from small arms to anti-tank munitions to grenades and mortar shells.

Jonathon Preston, a spokesman for DND's Unexploded Explosives Ordnance and Legacy Sites program, said many of those mortar shells might still be in the ground, ready to go off at a moment's notice.

"Until the risk assessment process has been completed, it is not possible to say with certainty what level of risk remains today," he said in an email.

"It is impossible to provide an answer to this question due to the availability, or lack thereof, of accurate information and records pertaining to military training and clearance practices of the time."

DND officials are still conducting research to determine how safe the area might be. As part of the geophysical survey, they must try to track all buried metal objects using technology similar to that of an X-ray. Each item, from mortar shells to pop cans, must be individually excavated. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Deaths

• Vernon Mayor Wayne Lippert said two boy scouts were killed in the 1960s after they found a mortar shell and started examining it. But he said most area residents know ordnance is afoot and are used to watching out for danger, exploding or otherwise.

McGuinty talks about research, innovation in Jerusalem

LIFE SCIENCES Premier Dalton McGuinty met with Israeli President Shimon Peres in Jerusalem as he began his six-day mission to promote Ontario's life sciences sector.

During the one-hour meeting Sunday, the two leaders talked about a variety of issues including research, innovation, clean water technology and health sciences.

They committed to continue building on existing partnerships between Israel and Ontario to help strengthen the knowledge-based economy.

There are about 900 life sciences companies in Ontario and in Israel.

Ontario's trade with Israel amounts to about $1.1 billion — which government officials say is an 86 per cent increase since 2004.

"Israel is a county on the cutting edge of research and innovation, two areas in which Ontario has strong expertise," McGuinty said in a statement. "Building on our strong relationship with Israel, with the potential for new collaborations in the future, is a true compliment to Ontario's researchers and innovators." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Claims 'nonsense': Lawyer

Korean pastor accused of running sex cult, getting credentials online

Reports that Toronto-area pastor Jae-Kap (Joe) Song ran a sex cult and received his religious training from a California mail order firm are fabrications, Song's lawyer says.

"That's a crock," Christophe Preobrazenski said in his first interview since Song was charged with sex-related offences in March. "The suggestion that this is a cult is absolute nonsense."

Preobrazenski said Song will be maintaining his innocence on a charge of inappropriately touching a female parishioner. No trial date has been set. The name of his church cannot be reported because of a publication ban in a separate criminal case involving former congregation members of his Korean community church. In that case, another former member was charged last week by police with gang sexual assault and sexual assault.

Jae-Kap (Joe) Song

Response

- Lawyer Christophe Preobrazenski made his comments in rebuttal to published comments by Jacqueline An, a lawyer for some members of Jae-Kap Song's former congregation. An accused Song of running a cult and orchestrating sexual assault charges against male members of the congregation. She also said she didn't consider Song to be a true pastor or minister.

That brings the number to nine members of the congregation — including two women — who have been charged with sex-related offences since March. None of their names or the names of their alleged victims can be published.

Alleged offences include administering drugs for sex, threatening death, forcible confinement, assault and gang sexual assault. The latest charges came after a sixth member of Song's congregation went to police and made allegations of sexual assault against the church's parishioners, but not against Song. 12-year-old allegedly caught with handgun, linked to store robbery

CRIME A 12-year-old Ajax, Ont., boy allegedly caught carrying a loaded handgun is facing several weapons charges.

Durham Region Police said an officer seized the weapon on Thursday.

Investigators allege the child had been involved in a grocery store robbery the day before.

Police said concerned citizens had seen the boy with a weapon and called police on Thursday. An officer found the boy riding his bicycle and tried to stop him. The boy then jumped off his bike and reached into the waistband of his pants, said police.

When the officer drew his firearm and ordered the boy to show his hands, the youngster allegedly threw a loaded .38-calibre gun over a fence. He was arrested without incident

The boy's identity is protected under the Youth Criminal Justice Act.

Folks – mark your calendars!

On October 25 – 5 months from now – you will be electing a new Mayor of Ottawa.

Alex Cullen, Councillor for Bay Ward, has the experience, integrity and leadership to become your Mayor of a growing, vibrant and green Ottawa.

So, what are the election issues?

✓ Rapid Transit

The City's Transitway system is reaching capacity downtown (where 70% of the jobs are). The Rapid Transit Plan converts 12.5 km of the Transitway to electric light rail, crossing the downtown by tunnel. It will cost $2.1 billion but will save 15 minutes on the average commute, increase ridership by 9%, and save $100 million in annual operating costs. This project will receive $1.2 billion in federal-provincial support, with the City's share financed through debt and development charges, serviced by the gas tax rebate, with no impact on property taxes or fares.
I'm for it because it is needed – what about the other candidates?

✓ Ottawa River

For too long the City's combined sanitary & storm sewer system overflows into the Ottawa River in rainstorms. The City now has an ambitious $250 million Ottawa River Action Plan to significantly reduce these overflows and improve water quality over the next 5 years.
I'm for it because it is needed – what about the other candidates?

✓ Homelessness

Last year 7,400 people stayed in Ottawa's emergency shelters. Over 10,000 households are on the Social Housing Waiting List. This has been going on for years, with no end in sight. Next year, though, the City will receive $23 million in tax room as the Province uploads services from municipal taxpayers. I say that we should invest at least half of this into addressing homelessness in our City.
I'm for it because it is needed – what about the other candidates?

✓ Taxes and Services

We all know that taxes pay for public services – "zero means zero" was an empty slogan. An efficiently-run City Hall means less pressure on taxes and more resources to meet community needs, whether it is for seniors, families, or people in need. Those are my priorities – what about the other candidates?

'Critical turning point'

South Korea aims sanctions at North following attack

South Korea won U.S. support yesterday for slashing trade to North Korea and vowed to haul its communist neighbour before the UN Security Council for a torpedo attack that sank a South Korean warship and killed 46 sailors.

UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said he expects the Security Council to take action against North Korea, calling the evidence that the North was responsible "overwhelming and deeply troubling."

The U.S. and South Korea are planning two major military exercises off the Korean Peninsula in a display of force intended "to deter future aggression" by North Korea, the White House said.

President Lee Myung-bak laid out the economic and diplomatic measures aimed at striking back at the impoverished North, including halting some trade and taking the regime before the Security Council.

International investigators concluded last week that a torpedo from a North Korean submarine tore apart the warship Cheonan on March 26 in the Yellow Sea off the west coast in one of South Korea's worst military disasters since the 1950-53 Korean War.

Lee said it was another example of "incessant" provocation by North Korea, including a 1983 attack in Myanmar on a South Korean presidential delegation that killed 21 people, and the bombing of an airliner in 1987 that claimed 115 lives.

"We have always tolerated North Korea's brutality, time and again. We did so because we have always had a genuine longing for peace on the Korean peninsula," Lee said in a solemn speech at the War Memorial.

"But now things are different. North Korea will pay a price corresponding to its provocative acts," he said, calling it a "critical turning point" on the tense Korean peninsula, still technically in a state of war because the fighting ended in a truce, not a peace treaty.

The truce prohibits South Korea from waging a unilateral military attack, so Seoul sought to strike at Pyongyang's faltering economy. Despite their rivalry, South Korea has been Pyongyang's No. 2 trading partner with $1.68 billion in trade in 2009, or about 33 per cent of the North's total. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canada acts

- Canada is imposing sanctions on North Korea for the sinking of a South Korean naval vessel in March. Prime Minister Stephen Harper said in a statement yesterday that the sanctions will include enhanced restrictions on trade, investment and other bilateral relations.

Human error may have caused crash: Official

INDIA Human error might have caused the crash of an Air India Boeing 737-800 plane that killed 158 people over the weekend, India's civil aviation minister said yesterday.

Weather conditions and other factors at the time the plane reached its destination "looked absolutely normal for a regular touchdown and a safe landing," Civil Aviation Minister Praful Patel told the CNN-IBN television news channel.

"You can't rule out a human error factor," Patel said. Only an inquiry could establish what exactly went wrong as the aircraft overshot the hilltop runway and crashed and plunged over a cliff and into a ravine at dawn Saturday on the outskirts of the southern Indian city of Mangalore, he said. Of the 166 passengers and crew aboard, only eight people survived the crash.

Investigators and aviation officials searched through the wreckage of the Boeing 737-800 strewn across a hillside to try to determine the cause of India's worst air disaster in more than a decade. They recovered the cockpit voice recorder, which they hope will give them important clues, the Press Trust of India news agency reported. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Britain takes aim at record budget deficit

LONDON Britain's new coalition government outlined more than six billion pounds ($8.7 billion) in spending cuts yesterday, including scaling back computer purchases, official cars for ministers and first-class air travel, but warned that these are only first steps toward slashing the nation's record budget deficit.

Treasury chief George Osborne offered no news on possible tax increases, which many see as an essential part of government policy. "This is the first time this government has announced difficult decisions on spending," Osborne told a news conference. "It will not be the last." Defence, health and foreign aid were spared cuts this time. Osborne gave no figures on how many public sector jobs would be lost, but he said most of the cuts would be through not filling vacancies. The reductions total 6.24 billion pounds, less than one per cent of annual public expenditure. Osborne's Conservative party leads a governing coalition with the Liberal Democrats which took power two weeks ago. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hard decisions across Europe

- Governments all over Europe have run up large deficits and heavier debt loads due to the global economic turmoil of the past three years, as tax receipts have fallen and stimulus and bailout costs have hit budgets. They are now facing hard decisions about how to get debt under control without undermining a shaky economic recovery.

TEAM ROMERO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On top of the world at 13

An eighth-grader from California who became the youngest climber to reach the top of Mount Everest said yesterday he hopes his achievement will encourage young people worldwide to dream big.

"I'm doing this to inspire other kids, hopefully across the world, to get outdoors and to set goals in life. I'm doing this to set an example for them," said 13-year-old Jordan Romero in an interview by satellite phone from the 6,500-metre Advanced Base Camp where his team had returned after reaching the top on Saturday.

"The record is one thing but standing on top of the world is just the best feeling you could ever imagine," he said.

On Saturday, Jordan succeeded in scaling the 8,850-metre peak, the world's highest, accompanied by a team that included his father, his stepmother and three Sherpa guides.

Before him, the youngest climber to scale Everest had been Temba Tsheri of Nepal, who reached the peak at age 16. The climb had its tough moments, the teen said, especially after he developed stomach cramps on the final ascent.

"It was the toughest part of the climb because I was thinking, 'Man, I don't know if I'll make it 'cause this is the worst pain I had ever felt in my stomach. But when we approached the summit, it all just faded away. I just felt happiness," he said.

When the group finally reached the top, Jordan recalled touching the colourful prayer flags draped at the peak before standing with his arms outstretched, yelling in exultation.

Jordan's success means he remains just one climb away from his overall quest of reaching the highest peaks on all seven continents. The final peak is the 4,900-metre Vinson Massif in Antarctica, which he hopes to tackle at the end of the year.

The curly haired teenager, from the San Bernardino Mountains ski town of Big Bear, Calif., said his parents have been supportive of his dream ever since he was inspired at age nine by a mural in a school hallway that showed the highest mountains on the seven continents.

U.K. A doctor who persuaded millions of parents worldwide that a common vaccine could cause autism was barred from practising medicine in his native Britain yesterday after the country's top medical group found he conducted his research unethically. Dr. Andrew Wakefield was the first researcher to publish a peer-reviewed study suggesting a connection between autism and the vaccine for measles, mumps and rubella. That prompted legions of parents to abandon the vaccine in moves that epidemiologists feared could lead to outbreaks of the potentially deadly diseases.

The matador lost his balance, fell to the ground and in an instant the 1,168 pound bull drove his right horn through Aparicio's throat and out his mouth. Still hanging around

Chrétien will have Parliament portrait unveiled tonight

NationalReport
Lawrence Martin

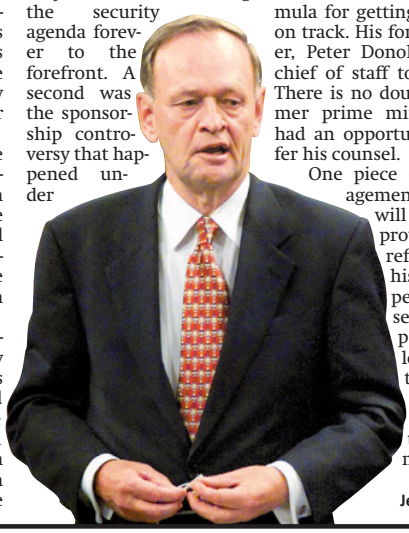
metronews.ca/nationalreport

It's Jean Chrétien's day today. The old warrior's portrait, which is to be hung in the halls of Parliament, will be unveiled in a ceremony hosted by Prime Minister Stephen Harper tonight.

A safe bet is there will be a lot of Liberals in attendance wishing Chrétien was still around. "Ah, the good old days." That will be the phrase on everyone's lips as his three straight majority election victories are recalled.

His legacy is getting better with time, particularly on account of what has happened since he stepped down in 2003. The once proud party has staggered ever since. Paul Martin won a minority and then was defeated. Stéphane Dion took over and the party declined further. Michael Ignatieff replaced Dion and the party's latest poll standing is at 25 per cent.

Three factors have been at the root of the Liberal decline. One was 9-11, which changed the personality of the times, hoisting the security agenda forever to the forefront. A second was the sponsorship controversy that happened under the Chrétien watch and cost the party a dozen points in the polls. The Liberals have yet to recover from that scandal. The third factor has been the party's inability to find a leader who can catch on.



Jean Chrétien

Chrétien's words today will be parsed for advice but he has no magic formula for getting the Grits on track. His former adviser, Peter Donolo, is now chief of staff to Ignatieff. There is no doubt the former prime minister has had an opportunity to offer his counsel.

One piece of encouragement Chrétien will be able to provide is a reference to his own experience. He served as opposition leader for three years and had a terrible time almost every step of the way and won.

Another sign of hope is the party's major opponent isn't exactly setting the world on fire. Since coming to power in 2006, the Conservatives have averaged only about 35 per cent support in the polls. Try finding any other government in Canadian history with rankings that low for so long a period.

What helped Chrétien enormously was the roll of fortune. He knows well that you have to have breaks to win in this game. He got his with the complete collapse of the Tory party in 1993.

The little guy from Shawinigan, however, had qualities the succeeding Liberal leaders have lacked. He was a strong character with homespun personal appeal. He embodied good old-fashioned Canadian grit.

Stephen Harper is seen as the guy with grit now.

UN review opens with dire outlook for marine life

Environmentalists are issuing dire warnings about the health of marine life on the high seas as a UN review of global fisheries opened yesterday.

The review, held once every four years, is meant to address the declining numbers of fish stocks under a 1995 United Nations Fish Stocks Agreement.

The legal framework among 77 nations that have joined is used to regulate tuna, swordfish and other migratory species that travel long distances. It also covers halibut, cod and other species that straddle the exclusive economic zones of coastal nations.

A Pew Environmental Group study found governments have been ineffective at stopping illegal fishing. Pew international policy director Susan Lieberman cited "the deplorable state of fisheries on the high seas" based on UN figures showing three-quarters of the world's fish stocks are overfished and said global fisheries could "crash" by mid-century.

Feds fighting against Net misinformation

The next time you post an opinion in an online forum or a Facebook group message board, don't be surprised if you get a rebuttal from a federal employee.

The government is looking for ways to monitor online chatter about political issues and correct what it perceives as misinformation.

The move started recently with a pilot project on the East Coast seal hunt. A Toronto-based company called Social Media Group has been hired to help counter some information put forward by the anti-sealing movement.

The Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade has paid the firm $75,000 "to monitor social activity and help identify ... areas where misinformation is being presented and repeated as fact," Simone MacAndrew, a department spokesperson, wrote in an email.

The firm alerts the government to questionable online comments and then employees in Foreign Affairs or the Department of Fisheries and Oceans, who have recently been trained in online posting, point the authors to information the government considers more accurate.

It appears to be just the beginning.

For some, the move to online monitoring was to be expected.

"I think we're seeing the government recognize that millions of Canadians are actively participating online in social networks," said Michael Geist, a law professor at the University of Ottawa who specializes in Internet law.

"We've had Facebook groups in Canada that have grown to the tens of thousands or hundreds of thousands of people, and they've clearly had a direct impact on public policy."

Some groups are wary of government employees being paid to post comments.

"I would certainly hope they would be up front about who they are," said Sheryl Fink, a senior researcher with the International Fund for Animal Welfare, a group that has long opposed the seal hunt.

Future programs

- The seal hunt pilot project was set up in part "to establish foundations and recommendations for future programs and campaigns to use social media as another way to listen to, inform and engage with Canadians," Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade spokesperson Simone MacAndrew wrote in an email.

PETA stock-buying tactic takes protests to company officials

An animal rights group known for sending out scantily clad demonstrators to protest fur and other provocative stunts has gained influence in boardrooms with a more traditional tactic: Buying company stock.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals has been buying shares for seven years and now owns a piece of at least 80 companies, including McDonald's and Kraft Foods.

It hopes to influence their animal welfare policies on such things as how chickens are slaughtered or buying pork from suppliers that keep pregnant sows in small crates.

By buying stock, PETA is guaranteed the right to present its ideas directly to officials and other shareholders, many of whom otherwise would likely pay little attention to the group.

"It gives us a new forum in which to present the research we've done to company executives, their shareholders and the public," said Ashley Byrne, a senior campaigner for PETA.

PETA tries to negotiate agreements with companies behind closed doors, but if that fails, the group submits shareholder resolutions with its proposed changes at shareholder meetings.

Companies don't always change their policies, but Byrne said the effort has paid off.

After PETA bought stock, Safeway grocery stores and restaurant companies Ruby Tuesday, Sonic and Burger King agreed to give purchasing preference to suppliers that abide by what the group says are more humane rules, such as not confining chicken and hogs in small cages, she said.

Internet marketing Google goes to the Mob

MARCIO JOSE SANCHEZ/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Omar Hamoui, founder and CEO of AdMob, poses at his company's offices in San Mateo, Calif., recently. Federal regulators are clearing the way for Google to buy a mobile ad service called AdMob. Friday's Federal Trade Commission approval paves the way for Google to extend its dominance of Internet marketing into the wireless arena.

Google hopes to 'bump' rivals in mobile markets

TECH It all comes down to "the five-finger scrunch."

In the multibillion-dollar high-stakes world of mobile computing, Google Inc. appears to be betting that cool little gestures like the scrunch will help it compete with Apple Inc.'s iPad and other mobile devices.

That's the view of analysts who follow the sector after watching Google pay an estimated $30 million for Toronto-based startup Bump Technologies Inc.

Bump invented and patented a new type of touch screen technology that allows users to interact with their files much the same way they do in real life, without using a keyboard or a mouse.

Founder Anand Agarawala described it in a 2007 speech in Monterey, Calif., as taking computer interfaces out of the "cave painting stage."

In a presentation to the prestigious TED (Technology, Entertainment and Design) conference, Agarawala said he took inspiration from his own desk to create a program that allowed him to "push and pull" items around his desktop with his fingers, instead of pointing and clicking.

"I can flip through them like a book, lay them out like a deck of cards. I can pull things to new locations. Delete things. It's all kind of smoothly animated," he said in a YouTube video of the conference in Monterey.

Google and Agarawala won't talk publicly now that they've made their deal. But analysts say the acquisition is all about Google's efforts to compete with Apple Inc. and Microsoft Corp. in the fast-moving market for touch-screen interfaces and tablet computing devices.

Golden forecast: Gold rising at a fast rate

GOLD Speculators are buying gold faster than the world's biggest producers can mine it as analysts forecast a 26 per cent rally that may extend the longest run of annual gains since at least 1920.

Exchange-traded products backed by bullion added 42.5 metric tons in the week to May 14, the most in 14 months, according to data from UBS. China, Australia and the 16 other largest mining nations averaged weekly output of 42.3 tons last year, researcher GFMS Ltd. estimates. Even though prices have fallen 4.8 per cent to $1,189.75 from a record $1,249.40 an ounce May 14, the median in a Bloomberg survey of 23 traders, analysts and investors shows it will reach $1,500 by the end of the year.

5 golden rules for new graduates

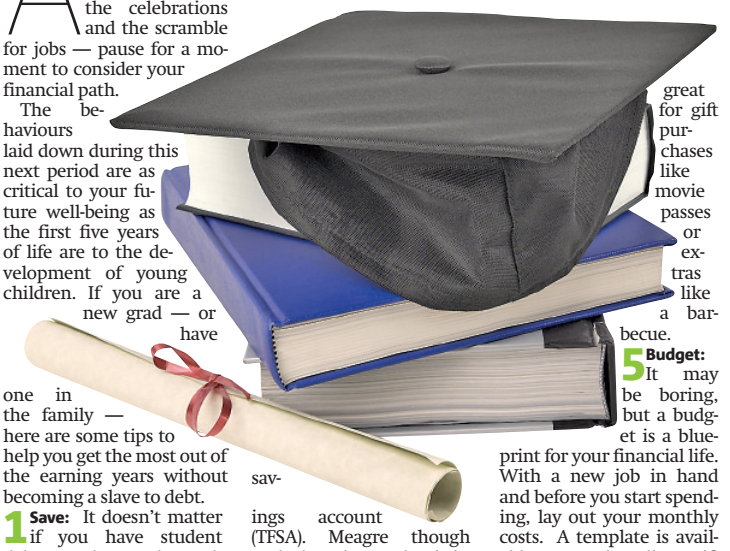
AlisonOnMoney

Alison Griffiths

metronews.ca/alisononmoney

Amid the euphoria of graduation — the cap tossing, the celebrations and the scramble for jobs — pause for a moment to consider your financial path.

The behaviours laid down during this next period are as critical to your future well-being as the first five years of life are to the development of young children. If you are a new grad — or have one in the family — here are some tips to help you get the most out of the earning years without becoming a slave to debt.



1 Save: It doesn't matter if you have student debt, a car loan and a work wardrobe to pay for, save a little something every month. It isn't the money that's important at this stage, rather the behaviour. Even $20 is a good start.

2 Increase: Each time your salary increases, increase your saving by the same percentage. Most do it the other way round. They increase spending first and often there's nothing left over to save.

3 Contribute: Take your savings and put half into an RRSP and half into a tax free savings account (TFSA). Meagre though each deposit may be, it is, again, the behaviour that is critical. Over time you build the TFSA for emergencies and the RRSP for the golden years. If you don't need it, the RRSP deduction can be carried forward to reduce taxes when the dough starts rolling in.

4 Use and Pay: Regular use of a credit card for purchases like gas or groceries will create good credit karma. The key is to pay it off every month. Look for a low or no fee card that offers loyalty points or some other perk. The points are great for gift purchases like movie passes or extras like a barbecue.

5 Budget: It may be boring, but a budget is a blueprint for your financial life. With a new job in hand and before you start spending, lay out your monthly costs. A template is available on my site, alisongriffiths.ca.

Market reaction overblown?

Investing

Allan Small

metronews.ca/investing

Sell in May and go away. If investors took this advice, they would be a lot better off today as the markets both here and in the U.S. have sold off tremendously over the last two weeks. The U.S. markets are down as much as 10 per cent (which by definition is a correction) while the Toronto stock market is off by about 6.5 per cent. Is this correction the start of a much bigger downward move? When will the selling end?

I believe this recent correction has been overdone. The issues in the European region are real but I do not believe that the turmoil in Europe should have this much of an effect on the U.S. and Canadian markets. The amount of business the United States and Canada does with Europe is not large in comparison with other regions. So why this overblown reaction? Our markets in my opinion are now at oversold levels and it would not be surprising for investors to come back into this market at some point soon.

In North America, we are seeing job growth, GDP growth, housing stability (in the U.S.) and companies reporting great first-quarter earnings.

I think we will look back a year from now and see that this was just a correction on the way to higher markets.

Chiefs mum about player's allegations

WOMEN One by one, from every corner of the locker room, Kansas City's players repeated the same line when the topic turned to teammate Dwayne Bowe: "No comment."

Chiefs coach Todd Haley took a similar mum's-the-word approach, calling his flamboyant receiver's latest distraction "an internal matter."

No one, at least inside the organization, wants to talk about Bowe's story, the one he told to ESPN the Magazine for last week's edition. He said teammates arranged for women they met on social networking sites to meet them at a hotel during a road trip to San Diego in 2007, his rookie season.

Calling it "importing," Bowe said the women were flown in three or four days in advance and took up the entire floor of the hotel. He said the women knew just about everything about the players.

Outside the team, it's caused quite a stir around Kansas City, a juicy plotline for an ordinarily run-of-the-mill part of the off-season.

The players and coaches wouldn't address the situation and Bowe wasn't available. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arron Asham and Jeff Carter scored in the second period as the Philadelphia Flyers advanced to the Stanley Cup final with a 4-2 victory over the Montreal Canadiens last night.

The Flyers, who squeaked into the playoffs by winning their final regular season game in a shootout, took the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final 4-1 and will face the Chicago Blackhawks for the Cup.

It will be Philadelphia's eighth trip to the final and their first since 1997. They have not won since they took back-to-back Cups in 1974 and 1975.

Flyers captain Mike Richards scored his first of the series while killing a penalty in the first period after Brian Gionta got one for Montreal, which looked to have run out of steam after seven-game upset victories over Washington and Pittsburgh.

Scott Gomez added a goal in the third as the Canadiens mounted a desperate charge but were unable to get the equalizer. Carter scored his second of the game into an empty net with 23 seconds left.

The Flyers were outshot by Montreal 27-26.

The Flyers defence proved too much for Montreal, allowing them few good chances in their four wins, and held one of the Canadiens best weapons, the power play, to 1-for-22 in the series.

Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final goes Saturday with Chicago hosting Philadelphia at 8 p.m. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Federer wins first-round match at French Open

TENNIS The French-speaking voice booming through loudspeakers at Court Philippe Chatrier recited Roger Federer's bona fides during pre-match introductions, detailing his six titles at Wimbledon, five at the U.S. Open, four at the Australian Open and then, reaching a crescendo, concluded this way:

"One at Roland Garros, here, last year!"

Federer smiled. Fans roared, many rising to applaud. Playing at the French Open as defending champion for the first time, Federer gave 'em plenty to cheer about yesterday, dipping into his considerable repertoire of shotmaking in a 6-4, 6-1, 6-2 victory over 71st-ranked Peter Luczak of Australia.

With the end result far from in doubt, Federer turned the outing into a glorified practice session. He closed one extended exchange by slicing a backhand with so much spin that, after landing, the ball darted back toward the net, away from Luczak. Federer acknowledged the cheers by raising an index finger, lest somebody forget he's No. 1.

Federer made only 11 unforced errors, won 50 of 64 points on his serve and faced one break point, which he saved.

"I was pretty relaxed," said Federer, who can tie Pete Sampras' record of 286 total weeks at No. 1 in the rankings June 7. "It was like a perfect match to get off the French Open campaign, really."

In women's action, Aleksandra Wozniak of Blainville, Que., advanced with a 6-3, 6-3 win over Iveta Benesova of the Czech Republic. The Canadian was pleased to open with a victory after battling shoulder troubles earlier this season.

"First time in a long time actually that I've felt pretty good," Wozniak said. "I almost forgot what it felt like — winning and feeling so comfortable with your game. Stepping on the court and knowing what to do and being in the zone. I think it was a good solid win." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big Byfuglien becoming a star for Hawks

NHL Here's how Dustin Byfuglien sees it: The puck always finds him when he is in the perfect position.

His Chicago Blackhawks teammates view it this way: Big Buff's easy to find when he's open because at six foot four and 257 pounds, he's hard to miss.

Whatever the reason, Byfuglien has emerged as a star for the young Blackhawks. He scored three game-winning goals during a sweep of San Jose in the Western Conference final that put Chicago in the Stanley Cup final for the first time since 1992.

Dustin Byfuglien

Like a big tight end clawing his way through defenders to get open or a linebacker crushing a running back with a block in the open field, Byfuglien's physical play, deft touch and ability to clear space have given his team another element in its quest for the franchise's first NHL title since 1961.

Put him on the same line with the team's most recognizable and publicized young stars, 21-year-old Patrick Kane and 22-year-old captain Jonathan Toews, and Byfuglien has really blossomed. He scored one goal in each game against the Sharks.

"I'm not really on any cloud right now," said Byfuglien (pronounced BUHF'-lihn). "I'm just doing work for the kids and finishing it up. I have faith in myself and I just kept going." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Food in brief

HEALTHY PIZZA Want to transform pizza from greasy to healthy? You can start by leaving off the cheese. In fact, most of time it's the toppings that turn pizza into junk food. Add sausage, pepperoni or bacon and your favourite pie turns into a fat and calorie catastrophe. It isn't hard, however, to end up with a relatively healthy meal, especially when making it at home. For lighter toppings stick with vegetables, starting with the traditional tomato sauce. Tomatoes are loaded with healthy anti-oxidants such as lycopene, plus they're high in flavour and fat-free. As for meat toppers, stay away from greasy sausage and pepperoni. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Summer sandwiches

Roasted Vegetarian Sandwich with Brie.

Italian Grilled Chicken Sandwiches with Pesto-Cheese Sauce.

Wraps and sandwiches are the perfect food for this time of year.

They are easy to prepare and take only minutes. Serve with a great salad to start and you have a fantastic nutritious meal.

Roasted Vegetarian Sandwich with Brie

PREP TIME: 15 MINUTES
COOK TIME: 25 MINUTES

After tasting this sandwich you might decide to go vegetarian! The grilled vegetables, pesto and brie are a sensational combination. And, yes, you can enjoy brie when you're eating light — just watch the amounts. SERVES 8

INGREDIENTS:

- ½ large red onion, sliced
- 1 red bell pepper, cut in 8 wedges
- 1 large portobello mushroom, thickly sliced
- 1 zucchini, cut in 3 slices lengthwise
- 2 Tbsp pesto sauce
- 2 Tbsp low-fat sour cream
- 1 Tbsp olive oil
- 2 tsp balsamic vinegar
- ½ tsp minced fresh garlic
- 4 large rolls (each 3 ½ oz), split
- 2 oz brie cheese, thinly sliced

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 425°F. Line a rimmed baking sheet with foil.
2. Place the onion, red pepper, mushroom and zucchini on the prepared baking sheet. Spray lightly with cooking oil. Roast the vegetables, turning once, for 25 to 30 minutes or until tender. Remove and allow to cool.
3. While the vegetables are roasting, combine the pesto and sour cream in a small bowl.
4. Cut the roasted vegetables into pieces that fit the shape of the bread. Place in a bowl and toss with the oil, vinegar and garlic.
5. Spread the pesto mixture over the bottom half of each roll. Top with the vegetable mixture and brie. Replace the top half of the roll and cut in half to serve.

Italian Grilled Chicken Sandwiches with Pesto-Cheese Sauce

PREP TIME: 20 MINUTES
COOK TIME: 5 MINUTES

I save calories in this sandwich by removing the interior from the loaf of bread and leaving the crust intact. The filling of chicken with vegetables, pesto-cheese sauce and shredded lettuce makes this a unique and delicious sandwich. SERVES 6

INGREDIENTS:

- 2 Tbsp pesto
- 2 Tbsp light mayonnaise
- 1/3 cup light ricotta (5%)
- 3 Tbsp light cream cheese, softened
- 1/3 cup crumbled goat cheese (about 1 1/2 oz)
- 1 whole Italian round loaf of bread (about 1 1/4 lb; about 12 inches across)
- 8 oz skinless boneless chicken breasts (about 2 breasts), pounded flat
- 1 roasted red pepper, thinly sliced
- 2 cups shredded romaine lettuce
- 2 medium plum tomatoes, sliced and seeded
- 1/3 cup diced red onion
- 1/3 cup chopped black olives
- pinch of salt and pepper

Nutritious and delicious!

METHOD:

1. To make the pesto-cheese sauce, combine the pesto, mayonnaise, ricotta, cream cheese and goat cheese in a food processor and purée until smooth.
2. Cut the loaf of bread in half horizontally and pull out as much of the bread as possible, leav¬ing only the crust.
3. In a nonstick grill pan or skillet lightly coated with cooking spray, cook the chicken breast just until no longer pink, about 5 minutes. Cool, then slice thinly.
4. Spread the pesto-cheese sauce over both the bottom and the top half of the loaf. Layer the bottom half with the chicken, roasted red pepper strips, lettuce, tomatoes, onion, olives, salt and pepper. Top with the top half of the loaf and cut into 6 sandwiches.

Nutritional Analysis per Serving (1 sandwich): Calories 345; Protein 17 g; Carbohydrates 53 g; Fiber 4.5 g; Total fat 8.3 g; Saturated fat 3.7 g; Cholesterol 20 mg; Sodium 560 mg

Shedding some light on vitamin D

CELIA MILNE
for Metro Canada

Two-thirds of us are still low in vitamin D. Although the sun is a great source of this needed nutrient, it may be tough to get enough vitamin D consistently and safely from its rays.

That's why most experts recommend taking vitamin D supplements and eating foods high in the sunshine vitamin.

"As we accumulate more evidence that vitamin D is needed for normal biological functions, we're thinking supplementation is a good idea for most Canadians," says Dr. David Hanley, a professor of medicine in endocrinology and metabolism at the University of Calgary and an expert on vitamin D and bone health.

Vitamin D deficiency is associated with rickets and osteoporosis, as well as bone fractures. It's also possibly linked with certain cancers (non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, leukemia and breast cancer), as well as multiple sclerosis, schizophrenia and type 1 diabetes. Having sufficient vitamin D is thought to boost the developing brain and immune system.

There's been a lot of confusion lately about vitamin D. Most people have heard that they should be taking more of the vitamin and have started supplementing. In fact, sales of vitamin D supplements are rising by 50 per cent a year, reports the CBC.

Sunshine is one way to get bone-building vitamin D, but exposure to the sun for long periods of time ups the risk of skin cancer. Supplements and vitamin D-rich foods are another way to go, but how much is enough?

But headlines around the country recently proclaimed that only a small fraction of Canadians (10 per cent) are deficient in vitamin D. So if people aren't deficient, why are they buying so many supplements? It turns out that the 10 per cent number was based on obsolete guidelines. Statistics Canada sampled blood from 5,306 Canadians.

The amount of vitamin D in a person's blood is measured in nanomoles per litre (nmol/L). In the old guidelines, having less than 27.5 nmol/L was considered a deficiency. These days, an amount that low is considered a severe deficiency — serious enough to cause rickets — and recent research shows we should all be aiming for vitamin D status much higher than that.

"Most of us in North America believe we start seeing health benefits around the level of 75 nmol/L," says Hanley.

When you use 75 nmol/L as the cutoff, it's more like two-thirds or more of the population that is deficient.

"It was confusing,". Hanley says of the study.

"They used a cutoff for defining inadequate vitamin D that most people consider outdated."

The Institute of Medicine, which last issued dietary guidelines for Canada and the U.S. in 1997, is set to issue new ones later this year, which will reflect the explosion of new research in the area.

Trials of twosome travelling

ISTOCK

Are we having fun yet? A trip with your partner can turn from hell-a-fun to just plain hellish in the blink of an irritated eye.

Traveling with a significant other can be very revealing. A guy I went out with in my early 20s showed his true nature when, on our return flight from a week in Jamaica, I reached over to grab his leg on the plane and felt something lumpy under his pants. No, not that.

He had decided to strap a bunch of drugs to his legs and neglected to tell me. Customs was a riot, I tell ya.

Taking a relationship on the road not only lets you know whether your date's a criminal, spending day and night together challenges your ability to put up with each other's moods, and reveals just how long you can circle an area late at night looking for a hotel room before one of you snaps. If it's road trip, you get to play the "Which Way Do I Turn?" game. Always good for a fight.

You're inches away from the intersection, there's an 18-wheeler on your rear end and he's screamin', "Which way do I turn?! Which way do I turn?!"

"If your idea of a vacation is paddling your way to an island in the middle of a lake and setting up camp and his is five-star hotels, it might be a problem."

and you're frantically searching for too-small-to-be-on-the-map corners on your 1954 map for a road that doesn't exist anymore. Then you discover just how long you can go without speaking to each other once you finally haul yourselves out of the ditch.

It's easy to understand why people enjoy traveling alone. When you're traveling alone and you get lost you can simply admit it instead of driving in circles with him repeatedly saying: "I'm sure it's just around the next corner, I remember from when my family came here when I was six weeks old."

There are lots of wonderful things about traveling with a partner. Discovering you travel well together can really solidify a relationship. It helps if you like the same things. If your idea of a vacation is paddling your way to an island in the middle of a lake and setting up camp and his is five-star hotels, it might be a problem.

For their first trip together, a friend of mine dragged her devoted city boy camping. She said it was like camping with Felix Unger, you know, the anal half of the Odd Couple? Sure, use the last of the drinking water to wash your hands for the 14th time in 10 minutes. Though the benefit is that the Felix Unger types come up with ideas like softening your hard-earth bed with leaves, she laughs.

Ultimately, it's not the where, when, and how of traveling together that are important, but your ability to go with each other's flow. Though, you might want to get yourself a fully updated GPS before you go, just in case.

YOUR EDUCATION IS A BIG PART OF WHAT WE DO!

As dentists, we are proud of the fact that we have a major role in helping our patients protect their health. The more we learn about the link between oral health care and overall health, it becomes more and more apparent that dentists play a vital role in protecting the total well-being of patients.

As proud as we are of that role, we are equally proud of how we can act as oral health-care educators for all of our patients. This is because of our belief in the power of preventative dentistry. The more we teach our patients how they can help themselves, the better they will be able to take the necessary action to prevent serious dental conditions from developing.

To that end, we invest a great deal of time and money in making sure our skills are as current as possible. That can mean attending professional education seminars. It can also mean investing in some of the latest technologies for our offices.

If you have been visiting your dentist regularly over the years (which we hope you have been doing!), you will have noticed a lot of changes there.

Dr. Peter Georgopoulous
Dental Surgeon

New equipment that could not have been imagined 30 years ago is now commonplace in many offices. One of the best for patient education is the intraoral camera.

This wonderful tool allows you to see exactly what your dentist sees when looking in your mouth. Using LED technology, these tiny cameras are easy to manipulate throughout a mouth, allowing you to take a complete look at parts of your body you probably have never seen before!

Just as importantly, the high-quality digital images they produce can be magnified to such a level, they can even help your dentist see things that might not be visible to the naked eye. For instance, tiny fractures in the teeth might be seen and can then be treated before they start causing any discomfort.

But the real beauty of this technology is the opportunity it provides to the patient to see what is going on in his/her mouth. Without that view, it can sometimes be difficult to fully understand the potential gravity of a dental condition that may be developing.

And the more patients understand about their oral health, the better equipped they are to address it on their own!

So talk to your dentist and ask if s/he uses an intraoral camera. Then ask if you can see some of the images that camera produces. You might find it to be an interesting, educational experience. And remember, educating yourself about your oral health is a healthy habit…and healthy habits lead to healthy lives.

Dr. Peter Georgopoulous

Shad gets Fresh start

Kenyan-born hip-hop artist helps define Canadian rap

TSOL is the followup to The Old Prince, which earned Shad a nomination for the Polaris Music Prize.

TheAudioFiles

Bryan Borzykowski

metronews.ca/music

If this were a column about the best YouTube music videos, Shad's spot for The Old Prince Lives at Home would probably top the list. The video is almost a scene for scene copy of the opening to the '90s sit-com The Fresh Prince of Bel Air, except the Toronto hip-hop artist's song is playing instead of Will Smith's famous rap.

It's an incredible recreation. Shad nails all of Smith's mannerisms and the twist ending is hilarious. The video got a lot of people talking about the rapper and got me excited about how he would treat the songs on his new album, TSOL, which is out today and is the followup to his Polaris nominated sophomore effort The Old Prince.

Shad's new album is out today

So, I was a little disappointed to discover it wasn't Shad who came up with the Fresh Prince concept. "I just showed up," he says about the video. "The directors threw the idea at me."

While I'd like to see another humorous video from Shad, I can let it go. It's obvious that the Kenyan-born, London-Ont.,-raised rapper put all his creative energy into this new record.

The disc starts off — after a two-minute intro — with an incredibly infectious soul track based around Rose Garden, a Lynn Anderson country tune. That alone would have been enough, but Shad's blistering raps and occasional oddball lyrics ("When Abraham went to slash Isaac in a sense he baptized him") turn this into yet another Canadian rap record that this country's music industry would be wise to export.

While some of the songs' topics may seem unusual — listen is all about, well, listening — he's not afraid to tackle some of rap's more sensitive issues, like the lack of women in hip hop on the track Keep Shining.

"Rap is still a very guy to guy conversation," he says, explaining where the song came from. "We're leaving people out of the conversation. We need to open it up more."

Another thought-provoking tune is the what's-the meaning-of-life track A Good Name. In it Shad explores the roots of his name and in the process touches on some existential issues about life and personal history. "That's a lot of where hip-hop is," he says. "It's about where you come from and taking pride."

The disc could easily thrust the talented MC into the same stratosphere as K'naan or k-os. And while American hip hop is still the place most people look to for their raps, Shad jokes that soon enough his Canadian cohorts will be the dominant ones. "I just have to sit down with my co-conspirators and figure out how we're going to make our move."

Husband of Brittany Murphy found dead

PEOPLE The husband of Brittany Murphy was found dead at his Los Angeles home late Sunday, five months after the Hollywood actress died, police said. Simon Monjack was 39.

The preliminary cause of the death of the British screenwriter is natural causes.

"We concluded there no signs of foul play or any criminal activity involved," said Sgt. Alex Ortiz, a police spokesman.

Firefighters responding to an emergency call from a woman at 9:40 p.m. found Monjack dead at a Hollywood Hills home. Ortiz said he didn't know who called. Monjack and Murphy had shared the home with Murphy's mom, Sharon. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadian comedian ups drama in new season

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

One year-plus into their marriage, Carla Collins and Tyrone Power Junior are still together and still making their confessional documentary series Carlawood.

Which may be a bit of a surprise to some viewers. I mean — what does a boisterous comic gal from Sault St. Marie, Ont., have in common with the quiet, low key offspring of a Hollywood legend?

"He's from this crazy Hollywood family and just rolls with everything I do," says Collins, who kicked off her second season of Carlawood on Monday.

"The fact we're different is probably why he married me. We got different energies. Like Desi and Lucy."

Maybe so. As evidenced by Carlawood, they do have chemistry — when they find the time to be together. Truth is, Collins' efforts to make a splash as a green-card-wielding actress and charity fundraiser often take her away her away from home and husband. Even Collins' first love — stand-up comedy — has taken a back seat in recent years.

Season 2 of Carlawood premieres Monday night on TVTropolis

Carla Collins returns with another season of Carlawood.

But not anymore. "(Yuk Yuk's) Mark Breslin said to me that you can't just do comedy every six months. You got to go up every week," says Collins.

"So I started going up on stage at these improv clubs in L.A. It's been great fun.".

Not that Collins' has been totally shying away from the funny. She just finished a autobiographical self-help book — Angels, Vampires and Douche Bags — which is chock full of odd, personal stories and advice.

"It's very confessional. And funny. It was great fun to write. And I've got some great reviews in the American press, which is a first."

The writing of her book is just one bit of drama from this season of Carlawood. One darker storyline involves the death of a family pet. It was one of the few moments that Carla wondered whether to let the cameras roll.

"This is a show about entertainment. So I thought about not putting it on camera but in the end we just let the cameras roll," says Collins, who doesn't like to display certain aspects of her personal life.

"I'm very protective of my family on the show. Though I do have my ex-husband on this year."

DVD picks

The Road

Director: John Hillcoat

EVEN WHEN HOPE has been exhausted, there is always love. This is what sustains us in watching the struggles of a father and son in John Hillcoat's bleakly inspiring adaptation of Cormac McCarthy's apocalyptic novel The Road.

Viggo Mortensen and Kodi Smit-McPhee are that unnamed father and son, and we have no real reason to expect a positive outcome for them. The world has been nearly shorn of life by an unnamed but likely man-caused calamity.

Yet we marvel at the bond between parent and child and their determination to keep "carrying the fire" for as long as they can.

The Road is a horror movie — cannibalism has replaced civilization — but it's an uncommonly smart and deep one. There's an Old Testament directness to McCarthy's prose, which screenwriter Joe Penhall has faithfully adapted.

A movie this austere demands much of its actors. American journeyman Mortensen and Australian newcomer Smit-McPhee are more than up to the task, delivering stellar performances as flawed yet redeemable humans.

Extras include a commentary by Hillcoat, deleted scenes and a making-of featurette.

Extraordinary Measures

Director: Tom Vaughan

A TITLE CARD advises us that this medical drama, efficiently directed by Tom Vaughan (Starter For Ten), is "inspired by true events." That's Hollywood code for factual liberties that have been taken.

For example, Harrison Ford's irascible scientist character, Dr. Robert Stonehill, is based on several irascible scientists. And the real family seeking a medical miracle, headed by determined businessman John Crowley (Brendan Fraser), lives in New Jersey rather than the picturesque Oregon seen in the film.

The movie actually works better as an instructional video on the flaws of the American medical system than it does as melodrama.

Lohan lockdown

LAYING DOWN THE LAW FOR LILO A judge has refused a request by Lindsay Lohan's lawyer to ease restrictions involving drug and alcohol testing on the actress so she can film a movie in Texas.

Lohan appeared sombre and concerned yesterday when she conferred with her lawyer about attaching an alcohol-monitoring bracelet to her ankle and requiring drug testing every week in the Los Angeles area.

Lohan's lawyer, Shawn Holley, told the judge Lohan was planning to travel to Texas to film a movie, but the judge suggested the actress may have to delay the project.

The judge also set a probation violation hearing for July 6 to address Lohan's failure to appear in court last week for a scheduled progress report on her probation stemming from two arrests in 2007.

Lohan, 23, did not address a throng of media outside the courthouse as she walked in several minutes late to the hearing and sat down beside Holley.

Lohan arrived in the Los Angeles area Saturday after a flight from Europe, where she spent a few days at the Cannes Film Festival and partying into the wee hours on the day she was supposed to be in court in Beverly Hills.

She was to be arrested upon her return to Los Angeles for missing the mandatory hearing, but the judge recalled the warrant Thursday after Lohan posted bail. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brit takes it out on hair

WHAT A TRESS-BUSTER Britney Spears' hair suffered from another meltdown by the pop singer, according to In Touch.

During a Mother's Day trip to Disney Land, Spears and boyfriend Justin Trawick reportedly had an argument that led to Spears locking herself in her room.

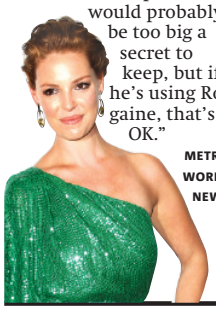
"She started out crying hysterically and refused to go out," a source tells the magazine.

"Jason and the boys were left sitting with the nanny all day. They never got to meet Mickey Mouse." While locked away, Spears reportedly ordered a pair of scissors delivered to her room and started cutting her hair off.

"When the cleaners came to the room, so much hair had been flushed down the toilet, it was blocked," the source adds. METRO WORLD NEWS

You don't have to tell her everything

JUST LET HER KNOW IF YOU HAVE A SECOND WIFE Katherine Heigl admits that it's OK for couples to keep secrets from each other. "I don't think my husband does," she says, though she insist she doesn't mind if he does. "I think if he had a second wife in Spain, that would probably be too big a secret to keep, but if he's using Rogaine, that's OK." METRO WORLD NEWS



Diaz, A-Rod get serious

WAIT TILL THEY MEET THE PARENTS Cameron Diaz's romance with Alex Rodriguez seems to be heating up. While in New York doing publicity, the actress used the Yankees slugger's Central Park West home as a base of operations, according to Page Six.

"Cameron went out early Friday morning to film Today and Live With Regis and Kelly, but then she went straight back to A-Rod's place," a source says. And while the pair seem to be please with each other, Yankees fans are still withholding judgment.

"While Kate Hudson was considered to be a good-luck charm, the jury's still out on Cameron," a source says. METRO WORLD NEWS

Metro Recipe of the Day

Crawfish Étouffée

INGREDIENTS:
1/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 green pepper, chopped
1 onion, chopped
1 cup chopped celery
398 ml can tomato sauce
1 cup water
1 tbsp Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp garlic powder
1 tsp paprika
1 tsp lemon juice
3/4 tsp Creole seasoning
1 kg frozen cooked crawfish tails, thawed
Hot cooked rice

METHOD:
1. In heavy Dutch oven, whisk flour and oil until smooth. Cook over medium-high heat 5 minutes, whisking constantly. Reduce heat to medium; cook and stir 10 minutes longer or until mixture is reddish-brown.
2. Add green pepper, onion and celery; cook and stir 5 minutes. Add tomato sauce, water, Worcestershire sauce, garlic powder, paprika, lemon juice and Creole seasoning. Bring to boil.
3. Reduce heat; cover and simmer for 45 minutes. Add crawfish; heat through. Serve with rice.
